

THE SUNDAY MICRO-HABIT PLANNER

THE ATOMIC RESET

A 60-Minute Sunday System for Women Who Are Tired of Being Tired

small wins count.

CALM · CONTROL · TEN MINUTES AT A TIME

A Little Welcome Letter

We don't need a new life. We need a 10-minute reset.

Hi, friend —

If you're here, I'm guessing you're a little tired. Tired of planners that ask for more than you have. Tired of systems that start on Monday and collapse by Wednesday. Tired of feeling like rest is something you have to earn.

So let's do this differently. This planner is built on one quiet idea: you don't need a whole new life — you need a 10-minute reset. Just enough to feel your shoulders drop. Small, repeatable wins that stack into a calmer week, without the guilt or the all-or-nothing spiral.

Every Sunday, you'll spend about 60 minutes moving gently through six tiny blocks. Ten minutes here, ten minutes there. No perfection required — done is softer than perfect. Some weeks you'll do all six. Some weeks you'll do one, in your pajamas, with cold coffee. Both count.

Think of me as the organized friend who shows up with tea, not a to-do list. We're not here to optimize you. We're here to help you feel at home in your week again — one tiny thing at a time.

With warmth,

The Atomic Reset

How to Use This Workbook

Six tiny phases, ten minutes each. Start anywhere — this is a menu, not a mandate.

The Science of Micro-Habits

Why ten honest minutes beat a two-hour overhaul you'll dread and skip.

HABIT STACKING

New habits stick best when they lean on old ones. Anchor a tiny action to something you already do — “after I pour my coffee, I’ll wipe one counter” — and your existing routine does the remembering for you.

THE DOPAMINE LOOP

Your brain rewards completion, not size. Finishing a 10-minute task releases the same little hit of done-it satisfaction as a huge one — so small, frequent wins keep motivation topped up instead of bottomed out.

LOWER THE BAR

A two-hour reset needs willpower, calendar space, and a good mood all at once. A ten-minute reset only needs ten minutes. Shrinking the task removes the friction that makes us quit before we start.

REPETITION OVER INTENSITY

Calm is built on rhythm, not heroics. Doing a little, often, rewires the routine far more durably than doing a lot, once — and it leaves you with energy to spare for the rest of your life.

Small is not the compromise. Small is the strategy.

The Master Timeline

One gentle hour, six ten-minute blocks. Set a timer, breathe, begin.

Brain Dump

Don't organize it. Don't solve it. Just get it out of your head and onto paper.

WHAT'S LOOPING IN YOUR HEAD?

WHAT CAN WAIT UNTIL TUESDAY?

ONE THING I'M LETTING GO OF THIS WEEK

You don't have to carry it all at once.

10-Minute Space Reset

Not a deep clean — five surfaces, ten minutes. Reset, don't scrub.

Entryway

Clear shoes & bags off the floor

Wipe the catch-all surface

Hang up the coats

Kitchen Counter

Clear the dish pile

Wipe counters left to right

Reset the coffee station

Bathroom Sink

Stow stray products

Wipe the basin & mirror

Swap in a fresh hand towel

Bedroom Nightstand

Return cups & plates to the kitchen

Tidy the charging cables

Set out tomorrow's water

Done is softer than perfect.

Digital Declutter Sprint

Ten minutes to quiet the noise. Imperfect counts — just lower the volume.

Inbox, Lightly

- Archive anything older than two weeks
- Unsubscribe from three senders
- Star only what truly needs a reply
- Empty the trash & spam

Photos

- Delete 20 blurry or duplicate shots
- Clear the screenshots folder
- Make one 'favorites' album

Notifications

- Mute three of the noisiest apps
- Turn off badge dots for social
- Silence group chats until morning

Screen-Time Check

- Glance at this week's number — no judgment
- Set one gentle app limit
- Pick one screen-free pocket of tomorrow

This week's screen-time number (just noticing):

one tiny thing.

Meal Prep Lite

You're not cooking — you're deciding. Nine easy meals, no complicated recipes.

TOP 3 PRIORITIES

ONE SOCIAL PLAN

ONE REST BLOCK

Self-Care Ritual Menu

Pick one. Not all of them — one. You don't have to earn this.

A Warm Bath

Ten quiet minutes. Phone in the other room.

A Slow Walk

Around the block. No step goal, no podcast required.

Journal

Three lines. Or one. Whatever wants to come out.

Stretch

Gentle floor stretches while the kettle boils.

Call a Friend

The one who makes you laugh, not the one who drains you.

Read 10 Pages

Fiction counts. Especially fiction.

Rest is not the reward for finishing. It's part of the work.

Habit Stack Builder

Attach the new to the familiar. Your old routine becomes the reminder.

The formula

After I [something I already do], I will [one tiny new habit]

Your stacks

After I _____, I will _____

After I _____, I will _____

After I _____, I will _____

After I _____, I will _____

After I _____, I will _____

After I _____, I will _____

Example: After I pour my morning coffee, I will write down one tiny win.

4-Week Habit Tracker

Seven habits, twenty-eight days. Fill a square; watch the calm compound.

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24	25	26	27	28

☐ = a small win blank square = a gentle skip, not a failure

NEED A NUDGE? TRY ONE

- Drink a glass of water
- Two-minute stretch
- One kind message
- Make the bed
- Read two pages
- Lights out 15 min earlier

MY FOCUS THIS MONTH

Missed a day? Begin again. The calm is the point.

Weekly Reflection

Three soft questions. No grading, no streak to protect — just noticing.

1

What worked?

Where did things feel a little easier this week?

2

What drained me?

What can I do less of, delegate, or simply drop?

3

My one tiny win

The smallest thing I'm quietly proud of.

Energy Audit

Shade the battery for how full you felt. Patterns whisper where your week leaks.

WHAT I NOTICED

Renter's Rules: No-Damage Refresh

Make a rental feel like yours — and still get every dollar of your deposit back.

1 Removable, always

If it can't come off cleanly, it doesn't come on. Hooks, strips, and tension rods are your love language now.

2 Photograph first

Before you change a thing, document the original. Future-you, standing at move-out, will be so grateful.

3 Test in a corner

Adhesives behave differently on every wall. Try a small, hidden spot and wait a day before you commit.

4 Keep the originals

Save the blinds, the shower head, the cabinet pulls. Swap freely — then put the originals back before you leave.

Your home can be temporary and still feel like yours.

Small-Space Maintenance

Monthly ten-minute jobs that keep a studio or 1BR fresh — and damage-free.

First half of the month

- Dust the vents & return-air grille
- Check caulk around tub & sink
- Refresh slow drains (baking soda + hot water)
- Vacuum the window tracks
- Wipe baseboards & door tops
- Test smoke & CO detectors

Second half of the month

- Clean the fridge coils & gasket
- Run a vinegar cycle in the kettle/coffee maker
- Wash or swap HVAC filter
- Wipe light switches & door handles
- Descale the shower head
- Flip & rotate the mattress

Done-this-month date: _____

Next reset: _____

Balcony Glow-Up

Ten-minute weekly tasks to turn a forgotten ledge into your favorite room.

Sweep the floor & corners

Wipe down the railing

Rotate & fluff the cushions

Wipe the little side table

Empty & rinse any saucers

Check & water the plants

Test the string lights

Shake out the outdoor rug

Refill the watering can

Tidy the cozy-blanket basket

BALCONY WISH-LIST (REMOVABLE ONLY!)

Renter-Safe Decor Swaps

Fifteen ways to get the look without losing the deposit.

- | | | | |
|----|---|----|--|
| 01 | Nails & screw holes
→ Command hooks & adhesive strips | 09 | Drilled curtain rods
→ Tension-rod curtains |

Sunday Reset

Your weekly soft landing. Reprint or duplicate this page as often as you like.

This week I want to feel...

name the feeling, not the to-do

Three gentle priorities

the ones that actually matter

One thing I'm releasing

permission to let it go

My self-care plan

pick it now, future-you will thank you

A new week is just a new ten minutes.

Monday Intention

Set the tone before the inbox does. One calm intention beats ten frantic tasks.

 Today's one intention the single word or phrase for the day

 The one thing that must get done

just one — the rest is bonus

 A small kindness (to me or someone else)

tiny counts

 Tonight I'll wind down by...

decide now, drift later

Start gently. The week will keep up.

Midweek Check-In

Wednesday is for course-correcting with kindness, not for catching up in a panic.

How am I, really?

a one-line honest check

What can I drop or push to next week?

lighten the load

What's already gone well?

collect the small wins

Halfway is not behind. Halfway is halfway.

Friday Wind-Down

Close the week on purpose. Loose ends tied gently, so the weekend stays soft.

This week's tiny win

the one I want to remember

Anything to hand off to next week

park it, don't carry it

How I want this weekend to feel

name it, then protect it

You did enough. You are enough.

Saturday Slow Morning

No agenda required. A page for permission to move at the speed of honey.

This morning I'd love to...

want-to, not have-to Something just for joy

no productivity allowed

A tiny something for the home (optional!)

only if it sounds nice

I'm grateful for...

three small things

Slow is a pace, not a failure.

30 Micro-Habits Master List

A menu of ten-minute wins. Steal freely — pick one category, pick one habit.

- Review one bill

Mind

- Three deep breaths
- Write one line
- Read two pages
- Tidy phone home screen
- One thing you're glad about
- Sit quietly for 60 seconds

Relationships

- Send one kind text
- Reply to that voicemail
- Plan one small meetup
- Compliment someone
- Put the phone away at dinner
- Say no to one thing

Emergency Reset

For the weeks that got away from you. When you only have 15 minutes — do this.

When you only have 15 minutes

5 min

One surface

Clear the kitchen counter or the spot you see most. Just one.

3 min

One load

Start the dishwasher or a load of laundry. Let a machine help.

3 min

One list

Brain-dump the top five loops. Circle the single most urgent.

2 min

One reset

Refill your water, open a window, change into clean clothes.

2 min

One breath

Sit down. Three slow breaths. You caught it. That's enough.

A hard week is not a failed week.

Quarterly Review

Every ninety days, zoom out gently. Big-picture reflection, zero pressure.

What felt good this season?

What quietly drained me?

What do I want more of next quarter?

What do I want less of?

My one word for next quarter:

The 5-Minute Morning Reset

For days when Sunday didn't happen. Five minutes to start anyway.

01

Make the bed

Sixty seconds. It tells your brain the day has begun.

02

Drink water

A full glass before the coffee. Your body says thank you.

03

Name one thing

The single must-do for today. Write it where you'll see it.

04

Open a window

Light and air, even for a moment. Reset the room and your head.

05

One deep breath

In for four, out for six. You're allowed to start small.

If Sunday slipped by, today still counts.

Thank You + Next Steps

You showed up for yourself. That's the win.

Thank you — truly. Out of everything competing for your attention this week, you chose a quieter way of doing things. That matters more than any checked box.

Here's my hope for you: that this becomes less of a planner and more of a habit. That "Sunday reset" turns into something your shoulders recognize — a small, repeatable hour that hands you back your week. You don't have to do it perfectly. You just have to keep coming back to one tiny thing.

If this workbook helped you breathe a little easier, would you tell one person? A quick, honest review helps another tired, overwhelmed human find a calmer way — and it genuinely makes my day.

Two tiny next steps

Leave a kind, honest review — it takes two minutes.
